March is Community Social Services Month!

In cities and towns across BC, community social service workers staff group homes for people with developmental disabilities. We counsel and support immigrant families. We work in child care centres. We work in transition houses for victims of violence. We provide women's services, and assistance for First Nations families.

Over 15,000 workers in community social services are represented by thirteen unions under one major collective agreement.

We make a difference in your community every day.

This March, join in celebrating Community Social Services Month!
